The Villa is one of our most loved styles of character property. Dating back to Victorian days, there are many styles of villa found all over New Zealand.

From the late 1800s as towns grew and developed demand grew for properties with more rooms than the original pioneer houses. The villa was the preferred house style right up until World War 1 when the Bungalow style started to have a strong influence.

Early villas were smaller and simpler in design but the designs developed in complexity over time as customers became increasingly more affluent and wanted more from their living spaces.

Next Level Joinery make interior and exterior door & windows for every style of property, so that when you renovate, you can be confident that you'll have the authentic products for your home.

This catalogue shows a wide of single door styles and a variety of framed options to help give you inspiration in planning your renovation or new build.

Don't forget that we supply and install hardware and glazing making Next Level Joinery your perfect partner for your next project.

Whilst there are several standard sized doors, many doors are made in custom sizes. We can advise on proportions and sizes of panels to ensure that your door looks good in your home.

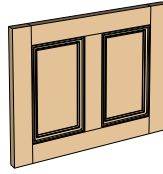

In addition to paint quality doors, we are happy to make doors from timbers such as cedar or rimu so that you can stain them. We are happy to advise on on choice of timber to be used.

Advice about glass and door & window hardware is also all part of our service.
