The Bungalow in all its many types is a very popular style of character home which provides almost endless opportunities for renovation and improvement.

The house style dates back to around 1910 when some bungalow features were incorporated into the Villa style - these are often know and transitional villas.

Many bungalow features and styles came from the Arts & crafts movement which had a strong focus on functionality and use of space.

The style was popular well into the 20th century and many post World War II house incorporate some of these features.

Next Level Joinery make interior and exterior door & windows for every style of property, so that when you renovate, you can be confident that you'll have the authentic products for your home.

Whilst there are several standard sized doors, many doors are made in custom sizes. We can advise on proportions and sizes of panels to ensure that your door looks good in your home.

In addition to paint quality doors, we are happy to make doors from timbers such as cedar or rimu so that you can stain them. We are happy to advise on on choice of timber to be used.

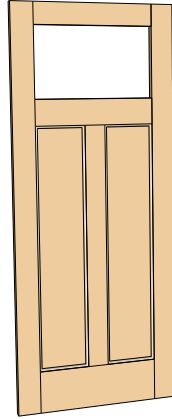

Advice about glass and door & window hardware is also all part of our service.

Single doors - Bungalow quad profile

The Bungalow quad profile is a popular and authentic door design. The quad profile on the panel edges provides a visually interesting feature. In our experience quad profile doors had a smaller top panel than the simple profile door. Section images of the profiles can be seen on page 6.
